DIAGRAM OF THE NAVAL DISPLAY.

As the Despatch passed up the lane of vessels, salutes of twenty-one guns were given, yards were manned, steamboats, yachts and tugs dipped colors and blew steam whistles, no blast being more than a half minute in length.

When the Despatch had passed between the two big divisions they got under way. The vessel was a company of boys in Continental uniform and commanded by Major Charles Halsey, a soldierly fellow of thirteen summers.

The entrance to Gov. Green's house was guarded by city police, and the officers of Gov. Green's staff in full dress uniform adorned the front piazza.

REAR PART AT GOV. GREEN'S HOME. President Harrison breakfasted with the Governor, after which he ascended a reviewing stand erected on the lawn at the side of the house, and there reviewed a procession of Elizabethans.

MAYOR GRIFFIN'S ARRIVAL. Vice-President Morton, Mrs. Morton and John J. Blair arrived from New York last evening. They were met at the train by Congressman John Keen with his carriage drawn by a span of milk-white horses.

Elizabeth was but a hamlet 100 years ago when Washington passed through on his way to Utica. The historic homestead of the Keen family there, on the Morris turnpike, a mile out of town.

AT ST. GEORGE

First Game of the Giants on Their New Grounds.

THEY MEET THE SENATORS.

Ex-Bostonians Morrill and Wise
Among the Visitors and Loudly Cheered.

TWO HOME RUNS BY GIANTS.

New York 4
Washington 2

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
ST. GEORGE, S. I., April 29.—When, a trifle after 2 o'clock, the crowd began to assemble on the New York's new ball grounds on Staten Island the prospects for a game seemed rather shaky.

Hundreds of workmen were still engaged in grading and rolling the diamond, and carpenters were fitting pieces of board to dangerous-looking holes in the outfield which at present is form d of the stage on which in Summers past Kirby's spectacles have been shown.

President Day was overlooking the work from a standpoint taken in the center of the diamond. "This is nothing but the cleaning up," said he. "We shall be ready at 4 o'clock."

And "ready" the grounds were, but it was a primitive sort of ready. Despite the work done by heavy rollers, the diamond was so soft and slumpy that it seemed improbable that a ground ball, no matter how hard hit, could make much headway.

The outfield, however, must have a contrary effect upon batted balls. The opinion of nearly every player, before the game was that if a ball passed an outfielder, nothing less than a home run could result.

At 3.15 o'clock the Washingtons took the field for practice. They were a very different looking club from the Senators of last year. But one man, Myers, of last season's infield, was on the cards to-day.

Sweeney, who came from the International League, covered third, while shortstop and first base have the old Boston favorites, Wise and Morrill, as guardians. The latter is, as he should be, both captain and manager of the club.

The presence of these two last-named cannot but strengthen them greatly. Hoy and Wilcox are well remembered Senators of last year, and play their old positions in the outfield, while Carney, secured last fall from the Manchester Club to play first base, to-day played in right.

The crowd which came to see the game was of course a Centennial one. Soldier boys, small boys, G. A. R. men and countrymen reinforced the grunts on the stands. The game was a perfect din of cheers and peeped full of enthusiasm of both sexes.

The weather was good despite a rather strong wind which blew across the front. Spectators were dressed in black suits, only relieved by white lettering across the front. Speedy runners were in evidence, and the Polo grounds or of Ed Crane's dead monkey; but as the latter was looked to pitch to-day the monkey could not be seen.

The batting order was as follows:
NEW YORK.
Gore, r. f.
O'Rourke, l. f.
Ward, s. s.
Conroy, 1. b.
Slattery, c. f.
Whitney, 3. b.
Crane, p.
Welch, extra man.
Umpire—Messrs. Curry and McQuaid.

WASHINGTON.
Hoy, c. f.
Timor, l. f.
Wise, s. s.
Myers, 2. b.
Morrill, 1. b.
Carney, r. f.
Sweeney, 3. b.
O'Day, p.
Reasly, extra man.

Umpire—Messrs. Curry and McQuaid.
Ward, "volunt Johnnie" Late, arrived just as the game was about to begin and was loudly cheered.

First Inning.—For New York Gore fouled off to left, O'Rourke struck out. Crane to Conroy, Slattery fouled off to left, Whitney struck out. O'Day, p. No runs.

Second Inning.—Richardson fouled off to Hoy, O'Rourke struck out. Crane to Conroy, Slattery fouled off to left, Whitney struck out. O'Day, p. No runs.

Third Inning.—Richardson fouled off to Hoy, O'Rourke struck out. Crane to Conroy, Slattery fouled off to left, Whitney struck out. O'Day, p. No runs.

Fourth Inning.—Conroy hit a funny-looking triple to center. Richardson sacrificed and Conroy took third. Slattery fouled out to Mack and looked tired.

Washington's grounder was fielded in good time by Myers. No runs.
